White paper flags rising attacks, police shortage in KP

By Sheraz Ahmad Sherazi

A Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz (PML-N) white paper has raised serious concerns over governance, law and order and counterterrorism preparedness in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, citing a sharp rise in militant attacks, increasing police casualties, shortages of weapons and equipment, drug trafficking, smuggling and concerns over political influence in the police department.

The document accused the provincial government of failing to match its security commitments with effective action on the ground. According to the white details 122 KP police personnel were martyred during the first half of 2026, compared with 63 in the corresponding period of 2025, representing an increase of 93.1 per cent. Police injuries also increased from 14 to 175, or 106.3 per cent.

The document says militants carried out 680 attacks between January and September 2026, compared with 308 during the corresponding period last year.

The figures demonstrated the scale of the challenge facing the province's law-enforcement agencies and questioned whether existing counterterrorism strategies were sufficient to protect police personnel deployed on the frontlines.

CTD staff of personnel, weapons

The Counter Terrorism Department has emerged as a particular concern in the opposition's assessment.

The white paper says that against 3,844 sanctioned CTD posts, only 3,113 personnel were deployed, leaving a shortfall of about 19 per cent. It further states that recruitment of 638 field operators remained incomplete as of June 2026.

Equipment shortages were described as even more acute.

According to the document, KP CTD had only 17 helicopter vehicles, compared with 76 in Punjab. Against a requirement of 200 MTRVs, only nine were available, while the department possessed 11 night vision devices against a requirement of 35.

The PML-N leaders questioned the utilisation and impact of a Rs.77 billion package approved in December 2025 for CTD equipment, regulation and infrastructure. Khilafat Wali said the government had repeatedly announced measures to strengthen counterterrorism institutions but frontline personnel continued to face shortages of modern weapons and protective equipment.

Kohat attacks raise fresh questions

The security situation under renewed scrutiny following the September 18 attack on the Kohat Police Lines, where militants targeted a computer housing offices of the CTD and Special Branch.

The prolonged operation at the police complex, according to reports, lasted around 20 hours before security forces cleared the area.

The documents have cited the incident as an example of what it describes as weaknesses in security preparedness.

The document also refers to the July attack on a post in Hangu in which 11 personnel were killed, arguing that repeated attacks on checkpoints and police installations exposed frontline officers to serious risks.

Bleaker questioned government priorities

Sanaullah Khan Bleaker questioned the provincial government's priorities and the worsening security environment.

The document also refers to the July attack on a post in Hangu in which 11 personnel were killed, arguing that repeated attacks on checkpoints and police installations exposed frontline officers to serious risks.

She said police officers were confronting militants while operating under difficult conditions and called for greater institutional coordination and resources for law-enforcement personnel.

Bleaker also questioned the police leadership response following major security incidents, pointing to the chief minister's political activities after the Kohat attack.

Her remarks reflected the wider PML-N argument that the provincial administration should give greater attention to security, policing and the families of police personnel killed in the line of duty.

The allegations regarding the government's priorities are political claims by the PML-N and have been rejected by the provincial administration.

Khilafat Wali demands accountability

Khilafat Wali presented the white paper as an indictment of what he described as poor governance in the province.

He questioned why security indicators were deteriorating despite substantial expenditure on counterterrorism and why specialised institutions continued to face manpower and equipment shortages.

Wali also raised questions about the functioning of the provincial Apex Committee and the implementation of decisions taken at security-related forums.

According to the details, Sahal Afridi chaired his first Apex Committee meeting 112 days after assuming office.

The PML-N argues that the delay and subsequent security incidents raise questions about the effectiveness of political oversight of the province's counterterrorism strategy.

Drug trade expands

The white paper has also linked the province's law-and-order problems with an expanding narcotics trade.

According to the figures cited in the document, police seized 5,695kg of hashish, 847kg of morphine/heroin, 275kg of opium and 210kg of heroin during the first quarter of 2026.

Peshawar has emerged as a particular concern, with authorities reporting rises in alleged synthetic-drug manufacturing facilities.

One facility reportedly had the capacity to manufacture 90,000 to 100,000 tablets a month, according to the figures cited by the PML-N.

The documents also say the government's crop-eradication efforts were belated, with around 130 hectares of narcotics-producing crops destroyed by April against an annual target of 250 hectares.

Smuggling costs billions

The document further identifies smuggling as a major challenge to the formal economy.

It cites a national estimate of Rs.751 billion in annual tax losses from illicit trade in major sectors, including tobacco, petroleum products, tyres and lubricants.

Customs operations in KP have resulted in reported seizures of large consignments.

In January, authorities intercepted a truck carrying goods valued at approximately Rs.79.5 million, while during a two-week period in July, Customs reportedly seized smuggled goods and contraband worth approximately Rs.163 billion.

The PML-N says the repeated use of trucks, cars and passenger vehicles for illicit trade reflects weaknesses in enforcement and monitoring.

Timber smuggling under scrutiny

Illegal logging and timber smuggling constitute another component of the white paper.

According to official figures cited in the document, authorities conducted 233 operations between May 1 and May 19, recovering 6,770 cubic feet of valuable timber worth Rs.73.8 million.

As many as 59 vehicles and 31 illegal wood-cutting machines were also seized.

The PML-N has alleged that official negligence and the involvement of some government employees have allowed further timber smuggling to operate.

The provincial authorities have previously taken disciplinary action against forest officials in cases involving alleged illegal logging and timber smuggling.

Dispute over police control

The political controversy has also extended to the proposed Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Police Act 2026.

The provincial cabinet has approved a draft law that would give the provincial government a greater role in senior police appointments and establish a Police Policy Board headed by the chief minister.

The KP government has defended the proposed legislation as a mechanism to improve accountability and distinguish police responsibilities from operational policing.

The PML-N, however, argues that greater political control over senior police appointments could undermine the professional independence of the police force.

The issue is particularly significant because the province is confronting an active militant threat and requires a functioning chain of command between the legislative and operational police leadership.

Government rejects white paper

The KP government has rejected the PML-N's assessment, describing the white paper as politically motivated.

Provincial Information Minister Shafiq Jan has maintained that the government is taking measures against terrorism and argued that KP is facing a major vacuum of authority.

The provincial administration has also criticised the federal government for attempting to shift responsibility for the deteriorating security situation onto the KP government.

The controversy highlights the increasingly political nature of the debate over security in the province.

For the opposition, the rising number of attacks and police casualties demonstrate failures in governance and preparedness. The KP government maintains that terrorism is a broader national and regional challenge that cannot be attributed solely to the provincial administration.

Security becomes central political issue

The controversy comes as Khyber Pakhtunkhwa faces several overlapping challenges: militant violence, pressure on police resources, narcotics trafficking, smuggling, illegal logging and disagreement over the political control of the police force.

For frontline personnel, however, the immediate issue remains operational: whether police and CTD units have sufficient manpower, weapons, protective equipment and training to confront armed militant networks.

The figures cited by the PML-N white paper are likely to keep the security situation at the centre of the political debate over KPs governance, with the provincial and federal governments offering sharply different explanations for the deterioration in law and order.

'Law, order situation better in Sindh's riverine areas as compared to Punjab'

Sindh Local Government Minister Syed Naair Hossain has said that the law and order situation in the riverine (katcha) areas of Sindh has improved, with effective measures taken to control crime and a number of criminal elements also surrendered, which has contributed to the improvement. He said that along with maintaining peace in the katcha areas, special attention was also being given to development projects aimed at ensuring sustainable development and provision of basic facilities to the local population. Speaking to the media after a meeting on law and order chaired by Pakistan Peoples Party Women Wing President and Sindh Assembly member Farhat Tahir, Syed Naair Hossain said that the overall situation, law and order and ongoing development works in the katcha areas of Sukkur and Larkana divisions were reviewed.

Members of the National and Provincial Assemblies belonging to the katcha areas also attended the meeting and briefed the participants about development works underway in their respective constituencies and the problems being faced by the people. He said the measures taken in the katcha areas were producing positive results, adding that action against criminal elements and other measures had helped reduce crime, while several criminals had also surrendered. The Local Government Minister said the government was striving to further strengthen law and order in the katcha areas while also addressing the deprivation of the local population. For this purpose, funds had been allocated for various development projects so that issues faced by local communities could be addressed through basic facilities and other essential schemes and peace could be sustained.

Syed Naair Hossain said the law and order situation in the katcha areas of Sindh was better compared to the katcha areas of Punjab, adding that the Sindh government was working with law-enforcement agencies to eliminate crime and ensure the protection of the people. He said peace could not be strengthened through operations alone but that development activities in the katcha areas were equally important. The government's priority was to provide people with basic facilities and opportunities for development so that they were free from criminal elements and their confidence in state institutions was further strengthened. Responding to a question, the minister said there should be no objection if a child from Turan surrendered first position, adding that children from Karachi were also their children and every child in Sindh should be provided equal opportunities to progress.
