Metal Exchange (LME) was up 0.3% at $8,475 a metric ton by 1600 GMT after rising 1.1% on Tuesday.

LME copper reversed losses to gains after US second quarter economic growth was revised lower and US private payrolls increased less than expected in August.

Bolstering metals was news that two of China's biggest cities eased mortgage curbs as the government ramps up efforts to revive the crisis-hit property sector.

Metals industry players were awaiting manufacturing data from China on Thursday and Friday, which is expected to show activity contracted for a fifth straight month in August.

LME lead eased 0.5% to $2,180.50 a metric ton after touching a seven-month high of $2,213.

LME aluminium gained 1.6% to $2,203.50 a metric ton, and tin added 0.3% to $25,480, while zinc shed 0.3% to $2,433 and nickel lost 0.4% to $20,605. — Reuters expected in August, adding to expectations that the Federal Reserve would stop raising rates. Softening data this week has raised bets that the US central bank has concluded its tightening cycle. It follows a brief increase in expectations for a November rate hike after relatively hawkish comments by Fed Chairman Jerome Powell on Friday.

Friday's jobs data is expected to show that employers added 170,000 jobs in August, according to the median estimate of economists polled by Reuters.

Private payrolls rose by 177,000 jobs last month, the ADP National Employment report showed on Wednesday. Economists polled by Reuters had forecast private employment would increase by 195,000.

The greenback also fell on Tuesday after data showed that US job openings dropped to the lowest level in nearly 2-showed, and a 43% probability of a hike in November. The dollar index fell 0.54% to 102.97. It has fallen from 104.44 last Friday, the highest since June 1.

The greenback slipped 0.09% to 145.735 Japanese yen, backing away from a 10-month high of 147.375 on Tuesday, and reducing the likelihood that Japanese authorities will step in to shore up the ailing currency. The euro bounced 0.54% to $1.0938. It has risen from $1.07655 on Friday, the lowest since June 13.

Meanwhile, Australian inflation slowed to a 17-month low in July, reinforcing the case for the Reserve Bank of Australia to hold rates steady at its policy meeting next week.

The Aussie dollar was last up 0.54% at $0.6514, after earlier dropping to $0.64495 in the wake of the data. — Reuters
